I had the honor of deploying with a clone of the original prototype of the Corderized Power Supply CPS-0001. This power supply pulled its weight and then some! Justin Corder's exact words to me before I went down range were, "use the hell out of it, and give me feedback". So with that being said, I did. Primary communications on my Special Forces team was the PRC-148 (MBITR), which was not very efficient, because most of our missions outlasted the radios battery life (approx 8-10 hrs constant use). Fortunately we always had a HMMWV with a slave cable receptacle. When our MBITR batteries died we plugged them into the 6 cell MBITR charger which was powered by the CPS-0001. It was a savior to say the least, since there's always that one person that doesn't charge their equipment before the mission. At most of our operating locations, electricity was very scarce and very unreliable. We used "the hell out of it" for all kinds of equipment; laptops, TV's, IPOD's, Global positioning system (GPS), tazers, play station portables (have to keep our morale up), Iridium Satellite phones, Cell phones, pretty much anything we were carrying that needed a charge. This extremely rugged and versatile power supply did the trick. My team and I highly recommend the CPS-0001 for any kind of vehicle mounted operations or as main "building" power in primitive areas of operations.

The CPS-0001 Ruggedized Power Supply was all I could ask for and more. The CPS-0001 provided all of the power needs, during some of the heaviest fighting seen to date, for 8 JTAC teams that were under my control in Iraq. It was extremely durable and reliable. Not once did I ever doubt that the power needs of any of my teams would not be met with of the CPS-0001. No matter what we needed powered, it provided reliable power in the most austere environments I have ever encountered. I would recommend this piece of gear to anyone, not just military. In my opinion there is not a better, more versatile power supply on the market right now!

"The CPS001 is absolute power on demand! Simply put, once you have the pleasure of owning /using a CPS-0001, you will not and can not live without it. I was deployed to OIF from January to August 2006, my CPS - 0001 has seen ALL the extremes, and not one time was the CPS-0001 unable to keep up the pace with the high demands of myself as a Joint Terminal Attack Controller. Talk about efficiency and versatility, I had a CF-29 laptop with moving Falconview(R) moving map display, GPS Re-radiator, ROVER III, ROVER III CF-18 laptop, PRC-148 MBITR battery charger, external USB hard drive, cooler, and DAGR GPS running off it constantly during my 6 month deployment. That does not include the Iridium(R) charger, the PSP charger, MP3 player charger, and boom box that I had to make life a little more "live able". I purchased a CPS-0001 out of my pocket, because the new unit I am PCS'ing to does not have them. If I was told today to back my bags for another trip to "America's favorite sandbox" or anywhere else on this earth, the CPS - 0001 would be at the top of my checklist, right next to my rifle!"
